

MRS. CHAS. DOCTOR BURNS TO DEATH

Wife of Former Orland Super. Fatally Burned In Mystery Fire

Mrs. Charles Doctor nee Tilsy, aged 73 years, died from burns received in a mystery fire in her home on Wolf road about a quarter mile north of 159th street yesterday Thursday shortly after noon.

Mrs. Doctor's husband, Charles Doctor, former supervisor of Orland Township had just left the home about 20 minutes when the tragedy occurred. He had gone to the neighboring farm of his son Amil. The latter's daughter happened to glance toward her grandparents home and saw wisps of smoke from what appeared to be a fire in the garage.

She at once told her grandfather what she had seen and Mr. Doctor and his son Amil rushed over to the Doctor farm and upon arriving in the yard, found Mrs. Doctor lying on the edge of a walk north of the garage with almost all the clothes burned off her body. Altho unconscious there appeared to be a faint spark of life, but when father and son tried to smother the still burning shreds of her clothes, she gasped and died.

Upon entering the house, Mr. Doctor found the bed clothes in two bed rooms afire. The Orland Park Fire Department was summoned and quickly responded with their fire truck and put the blaze out before it could gain any headway.

Just how Mrs. Doctor's clothes became ignited, the members of her family were unable to account for. There was no open fire. The cause of the fire will forever remain a mystery as Mrs. Doctor was alone when the tragedy occurred.

The supposition is that when her garments ignited she tried to smother the flames with the bed clothes and when they caught fire she ran out doors. The strong breeze blowing at the time fanned the flames until she was a human torch.

The terrible loss of the tragedy virtually stunned the entire community and the deepest sympathy goes out to the deeply bereaved husband and family. Mrs. Doctor has been in quite poor health for some time.

Another son, Ray Doctor, well known Orland Park contractor and member of the school board, was hunting in the vicinity of his parents farm. A neighbor saw him and told him of his mother's tragic death.

Mrs. Doctor nee Mary Tilsy, was born in Homer township 73 years ago. On May 19, 1886 she was united in marriage with Charles Doctor of Orland township and has resided in this community all her life.

They were married in the old courthouse in Chicago.

To this union three sons and one daughter were born. The daughter, Esther, preceded the mother in death a few years ago.

On Tuesday, May 19, 1936, the children, grand children and other relatives surprised Mr. and Mrs. Doctor in honor of their Golden Wedding Day and those who were privileged to be present at that happy festive occasion, are deeply sorrowing at the tragic death which has separated this venerable couple.

Surviving are the deeply bereaved husband, Charles Doctor; three sons Lawrence, Ray and Amil; seven grand children, one sister Caroline Tilsy, Marley; two brothers, Louis Tilsy of Marley and Henry Tilsy of Homer.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon from the Schmadeke Funeral Home in Orland Park at 1:45 p. m., and in the Orland Park Methodist church at 2 p. m. Rev. Manly Mumford will officiate. Burial will be made in the Orland cemetery in the family lot beside the grave of her daughter Esther.

Halloween Pranksters Set Off Siren at Midnight

The Halloween pranksters turned in two false alarms in Tinley Park Halloween night. About 9:30 o'clock that evening the fire siren blew and the fire department crew responded to the village hall but no one knew of a fire. The local telephone office was swamped with calls but no trace of a fire was found.

Again at midnight the siren wailed and again the question of "Where is the fire?" was heard and again the telephone operators were besieged with calls but still there was no fire. It dawned on the firemen and the people of Tinley that this call was a Halloween prank. It was later discovered that some youngsters had discovered where the fire siren button is located and turned on the siren which continues to wail until shut off. At the midnight hour this made a spooky sound.

MRS. W. LAHMAN AGED 84 YEARS PASSES AWAY

Mrs. Wilhelmina Lahmann, nee Mindemann, aged 84 years died Monday morning at 5 o'clock at the home of her daughter Mrs. Herman Bruhns northwest of Mokena.

The deceased was born March 6th 1854 in Plumendorf, Germany and came to America in the fall of 1872. On February first 1881 she was united in marriage with Wilhelm Lahmann in Blue Island, Ill.

To this union four children were born, two of whom Mrs. Marie Nagel and William Lahmann preceded her in death.

Surviving are one daughter Mrs. Emma Bruhns, one son Herman, eight grandchildren and two great grand children, one brother Henry Mindemann of San Fernando, Calif.. Mr. Lahmann passed away in 1929.

Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at one o'clock from the late home to the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena with the Rev. Theo. Haefele officiating. Burial will be made in the St. John cemetery south of Mokena.

New Lenox PTA Plans Activities

The Parent-Teacher unit of the New Lenox school will hold its monthly meeting on November 12, in the school auditorium at 7:30 o'clock. After the usual business discussion the program of the evening will be in charge of Mrs. H. V. Griffin, Program Chairman. The unit will observe National Education week with appropriate talks and discussions. The New School chorus just organized this year will sing several numbers. This work is in charge of Miss Ruth Smith.

The Homemakers Group will hold its November meeting on the 10th at the home of Mrs. Hubert Jay of New Lenox. At this meeting the group will study child care and problems of the home and school. The chairman, Mrs. Edw. J. Stevens, will welcome all mothers who desire to attend.

On Wednesday Oct. 27, a tea was given in the school auditorium by the Homemaking Committee in honor of the teachers of the school. The committee in charge of arrangements was Mrs. James Gurley, Mrs. Edw. J. Stevens, Mrs. John Harvey, Mrs. G. Keuhn and Mrs. Wm. Kay. The auditorium was decorated with autumn leaves and flowers and dainty refreshments were dispensed from a lovely candlelit table. A large number of New Lenox mothers were present to wish the teachers success for the school year. The teachers for this year are Miss Eileen Delaney, Miss Nellie Brandt, Miss Ruth Smith and Mr. James Gurley.

On November 5, at 8:30 o'clock the Health Committee of the New Lenox PTA will give the second immunization for Diphtheria to the children of the school. This work is in charge of Dr. Jeanette L. Holt and Mrs. F. W. Reinhard. In succeeding weeks the Committee expects to give serum for typhoid fever and vaccination for smallpox. All parents interested in safeguarding their children should get in touch with the committee or the Principal of the school. Thirty-five children of the school are now receiving anti-toxin for diphtheria.

Puncture Tires With Ice Picks

Boys bent on Halloween mischief carried things a bit too far in Frankfort one night last week when they used an ice pick to let the air out of the tires of an automobile parked in front of the office of Dr. W. V. Hedges in Frankfort. The car was owned by people from Grant Park who had driven to Frankfort to get medicine. A special meeting of the village board was called and action was taken to prevent any more similar mischief with the result that Halloween passed off rather quietly.

Will Hold Joint V. F. W. Installation

The Wm. Martin Post 725 V.F.W. and the Auxiliary of this post will hold a joint installation of officers at the Frankfort hall on Saturday evening, November 6 at 7:30 pm.

Tinley Woman's Club Holds First Meeting of Year

The first meeting of the Tinley Park Woman's Club was held Wednesday afternoon October 27 in the Methodist church with 42 ladies being present. Mrs. Omar Ebenhack, president presided at the business meeting at 1:30 o'clock and at two o'clock a program was presented which was opened by an invocation given by the Rev. C. H. Hedler, pastor of the German M. E. church of Tinley Park.

Mrs. A. H. Swett, president of the Third district, gave a most interesting history of the Federated Women's clubs. She said before the the civil war, women were used to staying at home and keeping house. There was no need for them to do otherwise. But when the war broke out, and the men were taken from the homes, the women had to exert their resourcefulness and take their place at home and even on the battle fields.

After the war, the place of women was felt in the work of the world at large and they were relied upon to step in and help in any way which they could and which was greatly needed. Then it was, that a few women of great wisdom and foresight, saw the need of women organizing, to have their work more effective.

In their clubs of that early day, they emphasized method, management and manners. Today the Federation of Women's Clubs is the largest organized club in the country and their efforts are felt in the homes, communities, legislative halls and the country and world. There are 51 clubs in the Third district with 4,000 members. There are also 28 Federated Women's Clubs in foreign countries.

Because the Third district planted more trees in the tree planting project in the southern part of the state, the CCC boys made and presented to each club in the district, a gavel which Mrs. Swett presented to Mrs. Ebenhack, the later accepting on behalf of the Tinley Park Club.

Mrs. I. S. Turley, Institute chairman spoke of her work in the district after which Mrs. Wm. Suthers, district parliamentary instructor, gave a concise and clear definition of parliamentary rules which was very enlightening. Mrs. M. A. Hall of Oak Forest gave a reading depicting two women at a Woman's club meeting. The honored guests were the members of a newly formed club, Columbus Manor club.

At the close of the meeting, tea was served in the basement from a lovely table which was decorated by the garden department. Mrs. Ewert and Mrs. A. C. Rice, president of Columbus Manor club, poured.

At eleven o'clock in the morning the Literature class met and Mrs. Zobe gave a dramatic reading at this time.

Mokena Oil Co., Now Phillips Plant

Fred Rauch and Charles Burkhardt who have been operating the Conoco gas and oil plant at Mokena for a number of years have quit handling the Conoco products and have signed up with Phillips 66 and will handle the products of this oil company from now on. The change became effective the first of November.

Dance Postponed

The dance which was to have been held in the old Hatch hall in Mokena this Saturday night has been postponed until further notice as the work of redecorating cannot be completed by Saturday.

New Lenox Man Hit By Auto; Leg Broken

Jack Lannen, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Lannen south Cedar road, was struck down by an automobile driven by Orrin Sturthers, 23 years old Manhattan, Saturday night on south Cedar road 1-9 mile out of town. Jack was walking toward town with a girl, Miss Lois Wilson on their way to a dance when the accident occurred. Immediately he was removed to the office of Dr. Jeanette Holt by Sturthers and then taken to St. Josephs hospital where it was determined one leg was broken and the other fractured; also cuts and bruises. X-rays were being taken Monday to determine any injury to his head or back. He was brought home Tuesday from the hospital.

Mokena RNA To Hold Xmas Party

The Royal Neighbors of Mokena held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Groth. There was a good turn out. Some members that attended the RNA Convention at Plainfield told of the beautiful work it was suggested that we get busy and put on our regular drills and doings again, especially now that we invited the camps to have the next convention here in Mokena. But in order to do that well we need all our members to come out and work. You will enjoy it if you once come again. We always have a good time after the meetings, with cards, bunco and refreshments.

Next meeting is December 7. We are giving a Christmas party 10c gift exchange. Be sure to come.

Wade Krohn of Mokena Hit By Car

Wade, 11 year old son of Mrs. Ella Krohn residing on the Geuther farm northeast of Mokena, was hit by an auto shortly after four o'clock Thursday afternoon while playing along the road with other children. He sustained a broken leg. He was taken to the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet.

Mokena Basket Ball Schedule

The Mokena high school and grade school basketball teams open the current season tonight against the High school and Grade teams of Orland Park. The grade game will start at 7:30 and the high school game will start ten minutes after the close of the first game. This year the teams are selling season tickets that represent a savings of, nearly 50 per cent. Buy one and come out and cheer for your teams. The schedule for the year is as follows:

Basketball Practice
Coach Richard Kohl of the Mokena Independent Basketball team issues a call urging all boys interested in playing basketball to report at the Mokena school gym at 7:30 PM Monday, Nov. 8. Anyone unable to attend the practice session should get in touch with Coach Kohl before the meeting.

After the practice session, a special meeting will be held to decide on suits for the coming season.

To Solicit Red Cross Funds

The twenty-first annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross will be conducted from Armistice Day, Nov. 11 to Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 25. It is the new and renewed annual memberships, voluntarily given, which enable the Red Cross to act as the agency of the American people in the relief of distress and suffering. This is the one time in the year when the public is invited to support the Red Cross year round program.

Mrs. Wm. Semmler has been appointed as chairman of the work in Mokena and assisting her are: Mrs. Hugo Neithammer, Mrs. Stokes, Nebeker, Mrs. Wm. Lowe and Mrs. Anton Benson. Because of the activities in Mokena during next week these women will start the drive for the Red Cross before the 11th of November, so as to have it finished in the given time. Therefore they expect to call at each home in Mokena next Tuesday Nov. 9th and if you are able to subscribe for this worthy cause, it will be greatly appreciated. There are no paid workers in this cause. All money collected goes entirely to the Red Cross.

Mokena M. E. To Hold Bazaar

Be sure to attend the annual bazaar and chicken supper to be given Nov. 11 by the Ladies Aid of the Mokena Methodist church in the basement of St. John's Evangelical church.

The sale begins at 2:30 pm. There will be many articles suitable for Christmas giving to be found at the needlework and apron booths. Also a 5 and ten cent store candy booth and grabs. Serving of supper will begin at 5 pm.

An interesting program will be given at 7:30. Come and bring your friends.

DUCKER'S STORE FOUNDED IN MOKENA 1853

Ducker's Corner, Joliet's oldest department store, which was first opened in Mokena in 1853 by Geo. A. Ducker a year after the Rock Island railroad was built thru here, is celebrating its 84th anniversary this month.

When the store was first founded it was located about where the Bruns barbershop and the McGovney real estate office now stand, on Front street in Mokena. After a few years the store was removed to Joliet and has been one of the leading mercantile establishments in that city ever since.

In commemoration of this event, Ducker's are running special sales this month and in this issue appears an anniversary advertisement of this popular and well known firm. Read the specials offered and take advantage of them.

We take pleasure in congratulating the former Mokena store on its 84th birthday.

Morning Star Mission Will Celebrate Birthday

The famous Morning Star Mission of Joliet of which Peter McCarthy has been the head for over 27 years, will observe its anniversary on Nov. 17, 18 and 19. The "Hay Shakers" orchestra of Mokena is scheduled to play on one of the programs, date to be announced next week.

Mr. McCarthy reports for the 4th quarter of this year there have been 111 conversions, free meals given to 1522, free clothing to 147, 74 police and jail visits, relief given to 50 families, and aid bus and railroad fares for 34 persons. 80 percent of the relief administered went to 70 local people.

Orland Woman's Club To Meet

The Orland Park Woman's Club will meet in Creer's hall Thursday afternoon November 11 at 2:00 o'clock.

Mrs. S. Y. Patterson of Paola Park will speak on "Precious Metals in the home". She will use a personal collection of objects to illustrate her lecture.

Hostesses for the afternoon will be Mrs. Ralph Town, Mrs. M. J. Mumford and Mrs. James Creer.

CARD AND BUNCO PARTY

Don't forget the card and bunco party which is held in the Homer Town hall Friday evening Nov. 12 by the teacher and pupils of the Wells Corner school. Miss Helen Nemeth is the teacher. A picnic lunch will be served.

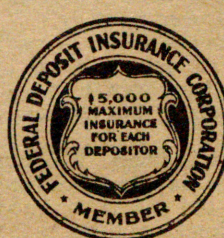

Will Address Midday Meeting

Mr. Frank Harris of Chicago, district manager of the Carter Ink Co. and a former First Reader of a Christian Science branch will be the speaker at the Midday Services broadcasted over station WGN 720 kc, Chicago on Saturday November 6 from 12:35 to 1 o'clock Central Standard Time. The address of this religious denomination is on the subject "The Fine Art of Successful Living."

Whether you desire a vacation that will lead you to distant points, new luxuries that will make life pleasant, a business of your own, or a new home—the sure way to attain that end is by constant savings.

It brings a pleasant thrill to see how a bank account grows upon regular deposits made each pay day. Month by month and year by year your accumulation becomes larger until you can enjoy the things you now so ardently desire.

Bragging Again

A statesman who was a staunch advocate of sex equality said to the woman sitting next to him at a dinner-party:

"My dear lady, I go farther than believing in woman suffrage. I maintain that man and woman are equal in every way."

"Oh," said the woman, sweetly, "now you're boasting!"

"And," said the instructor to the class as he finished his lecture, "if the parachute doesn't open, that is known as jumping to conclusions."

Enthusiasm

"Was my father very violent when you asked if you could marry me?"

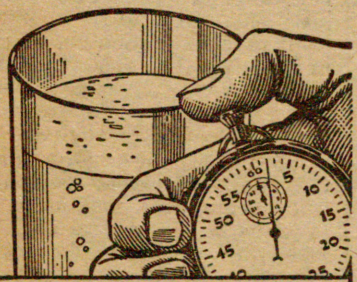

"Was he! He nearly wrung my hand off!"

Storm Brewing

"When we're married, darling, all will be sunshine. The dark clouds will roll by, the blue skies—"

"Oh, don't make a weather forecast of it, Harold!"

THE REASON HEADACHES ARE RELIEVED SO FAST

THE REASON BAYER ASPIRIN WORKS SO FAST
Drop a Bayer Aspirin tablet into a tumbler of water.
By the time it hits the bottom of the glass it is disintegrating.
This speed of disintegration enables genuine BAYER Aspirin tablets to start "taking hold" of headache and similar pain a few minutes after taking.

All people who suffer occasionally from headaches ought to know this way to quick relief.

At the first sign of such pain, take two Bayer Aspirin tablets with a half glass of water. Sometimes if the pain is more severe, another dose is necessary later, according to directions.

If headaches keep coming back we advise you to see your own physician. He will look for the cause in order to correct it.

The price now is only 15¢ for twelve tablets or two full dozen for 25 cents—virtually, only a cent apiece.

"But I hadn't known."
"You suspected that there was one, didn't you? You and Jed Stewart came to live in the Other House to watch me, didn't you? Do you think that I have forgotten that you called me a schemer?"

"This seems to be turning into a question and answer period. Suppose you let me tell my side of the story. Sit down, please."

"I prefer to stay here. Go on. I hope it doesn't take long. I have a lot to do before I leave in the morning—sorry to have to ask to let the furnishings stay here until Mother gets back, but—"

"Don't be so breathless, dearest."
"I'm not breathless, and I'm not your dearest. I wish you would say what you forced your way in here to say—and go."

"All right, remember, you asked for it. I came to say that day in Jed's office, I didn't believe that you had used 'undue influence' with my aunt. I admit that for a while I tried to fool myself, but I couldn't keep it up. I didn't open my house because I wanted to 'watch' you. I decided to do it on Thanksgiving day, because I liked you and your 'whole darn family.' As the weeks passed, Jed and I were sure that if the second will had not been destroyed, Henri knew where it was. Not knowing its contents hampered us."

"But you know now?"
"Yes. And it hurts infernally to think that you should have been drawn into this sordid mix-up."

"Why shouldn't I be? It's what might be called poetic justice, isn't it? Didn't I start the trouble when I went to Lookout House to see your aunt the first time? I'd been warned that business and friendship won't mix any better than oil and water. Now I know it. You had suspected for weeks that I had no right to your aunt's money, and yet you and Jed Stewart let me keep on spending and spending. When I think of those two cars I bought I almost lose my mind. How can I ever pay it back?"

"Pay it back! Don't be foolish. There is no question of paying it back. Have you forgotten that Mary Amanda Dane left an income to you?"

"You don't think for an instant, do you, that I would accept a cent of that money? Would you take any from me when I tried to divide with you? I'm surprised, I'm really surprised that you don't play the martyr and ask me to marry you."

"No. I shan't ask you to marry me. I've made a lot of mistakes in my life, but, believe me, I've learned enough not to make that one."

His cool denial hurt Brooke intolerably. He hated her, she told herself. Why shouldn't he?

"In the library a while ago you told Lucette you were leaving here because you had accepted an offer. Are you engaged to Jerry Field?"

A gate in the wall! A way out without letting him know that she cared, how desperately she cared for him. She laughed.

"I—Here come Sam and Lucette. They are stamping snow from their feet outside as a warning that they are about to interrupt our conference. Amusing, isn't it?"

"Amusing to you, perhaps. It isn't to me."

Sam's face was as red as the fire as he and Lucette entered the room.

"Sorry to interrupt, but—"

"Don't apologize." His face went from red to crimson. "I'm only trying to explain, Brooke, that the inspector's walking the floor and gnashing his teeth and muttering something about keeping the Law waiting. He wants you, Mark, and he wants you quick."

"I'm going," Mark Trent paused on the threshold. "Good-night, Brooke. We'll finish our talk tomorrow."

CHAPTER XVI

"We'll finish our talk tomorrow." A month had passed since Mark Trent had flung those words as he, since she had left Lookout House. They had echoed to the accompaniment of the whir of the wings of the great plane in which she had flown south at the urgency and the expense of Carston's Inc.; they had intruded in business hours; they had flitted like wraiths through her dreams.

The days slid past breathlessly. She was conscious of a sort of breathless urge to keep up with something which was escaping her. Keep up with what, she asked herself, as in the flower scented dressing room of Carston's, Inc. she slipped out of the green organza number she had been modeling and into a frock of cool yellow linen. She was looking out unseeing at the palm bordered white street when Madame Celeste entered. Her thin white frock rested Brooke's eyes after the rainbow collection she had put on and off for the last two hours.

"You done noble, chérie," the woman approved heartily.

There was something in her nasal twang as refreshing as a breeze from a thousand New England hills blowing through this tropical paradise.

"That last customer is one of the richest girls in the country. She ordered all the gowns you modeled. You look kind of tired, you've a right to, chérie, after landing that whale of an order. Get some lunch here, go home and rest until four, then come back. You will dress here, the society models will dress at the Shaw's sports house. Sidone will be there to help them. You'll be the only professional mannequin, but I wouldn't trust an amateur to show that wedding gown. The charity fete begins at five. The wedding party will be the last feature of the style show. Look your best. We expect that some prospective bride will snap up the whole outfit when she sees you walk up the ribbon and flower bordered aisle in that heavenly white satin veiled in a mist of tulle. You'll make a ravishing bride, chérie; it will be your last appearance, so knock their eyes out."

The words "last appearance" penetrated the turmoil in Brooke's mind.

"Last appearance! What do you mean?"

Madame Celeste twisted her amethyst beads. "Chérie, don't go white on me. You know business hasn't been too good, and I have my orders. After the fashion show I'm to hand you a check for your commissions and a month's pay and you're through."

"Last Appearance! What Do You Mean?"

"But—but I thought I had sold a lot of frocks since I came."

"You have, and you can search me for the boss's reasons. Never knew him to turn a trick like this before—but, I ask you, is any business being run as it ever was run before? I'll tell the world it isn't. I'm terribly sorry to lose you."

For an instant, emotion threatened damage to the enameled calm of the woman's face.

Brooke was still puzzling over the dismissal when she reached the small Bermuda-type house, with its whitewashed roof and walls built around two sides of a patio, in which she had been living since she had come to Palm Beach, and entered her room.

She changed from the yellow cotton frock to white shantung pajamas. She picked up letters from a desk, pushed open a window, stepped out on the gallery and breathed deeply of the light thin air. She opened a letter from Lucette.

For the first two pages the word "Jerry" monopolized space; to even a feeble-minded person it would be evident that Jerry Field was leading in a long stag line.

Brooke was glad of that, but how did Lucette manage to take on all the festivities and be fit for her work in the morning? As if she had anticipated the question, Lucette wrote, with words heavily underlined for emphasis:

"After this evening I'll cut out the night spots. There's nothing in them for me."

"So stop worrying about little sister, darling, and get this: I want to be like you, Brooke. You don't smoke, you don't drink, and yet I've never seen a man who, when introduced to you, didn't stand a little straighter, fuss with his tie, and get that I've-found-her-at-last look in his eyes; and you're grand fun and the life of the party."

"There, you have the inside story of my life, so what? Never thought I would let you know how I adored you—bad for you—but here it is. "Lucette."

"P. S. News flash! Sam's play may be produced any day. Its predecessor is folding up; it was a terrible flop."

Brooke shut her eyes to keep back tears. She had known that Lucette loved her, but that she set her on a pedestal was unbelievable. As to that "I've-found-her-at-last" look in a man's eyes, she should have seen Mark Trent's when he had called her a "schemer" in Jed Stewart's office.

Why think of it? Hadn't she plenty of happier things to think of? She glanced at the clock. Sam's play might be produced any day. She had lost her job. She was free to go to New York! Could she afford it? Why did that grubby question have to pop up to take the joy out of life? Of course she would go. She had flown to Palm Beach at the expense of Carston's Inc. She would take a bus in return on her own. She would go tonight, go on to a new adventure in living.

Tingling with excitement, she telephoned for a reservation on the night bus; packed a small trunk to be sent by express; folded her silver evening frock and accessories into the air luggage suitcase which Carston's Inc. had provided. She would want the gala clothes for the premiere—thrilling thought. She laid out an amethyst tweed suit with crimson scarf and beret, to wear on the journey. It would be cold when she reached New York.

All ready and somewhere to go! She glanced at the clock. There was time for a swim before she started for the style-show. It would set her up and refresh her. She must look her best for her positively last Palm Beach appearance.

She slipped into the white water-frock and caught up a beach coat. Life was gloriously worth while even if the man one loved did think one a "schemer," she told herself, as she ran down the steps which led to the patio.

She was humming a snatch of gay song as she crossed the strip of yellow sand steeping in golden sunlight which the march of fashion had left behind. Arms extended, she slid into the sparkling water. It parted. Buoyant, foamy, it closed over her. Marvelous feeling. This would stabilize her mind, drown haunting memories. She swam with quick strokes, turned, floated, came back arm over arm, and, dripping with coolness, waded out to the shore.

A man rose from the shadow of the dark hibiscus hedge outside the patio. Its scarlet flowers seemed to nod at her in amused derision as she stopped in surprise. Mark Trent! This was the cue for cool sophistication.

He held out the beach coat she had dropped on the sand.

"Put this on, Brooke. Let's sit here. I want to talk to you and we may be interrupted inside."

"How did you know where I was?"

"I've been playing round with Lucette, more or less. Saw Sam when I came through New York."

"Sam! How was he?"

"Nerves taut as violin strings otherwise in great shape."

"When does his play open?"

"Day after tomorrow."

"So soon!"

"Why that sudden look of horror?"

"It wasn't horror, it was—I've lost my job and I had planned to leave here tonight by bus, but traveling that way I can't possibly make New York in time for the premiere of 'Islands Arise.'"

"I know that you've lost your job. I had a talk with your boss before I left the city. He agreed with me that you shouldn't miss the opening of Sam's play."

"You mean that you told him to fire me? What right have you to interfere in my life?"

"The right of a sort of guardian; didn't Aunt Mary Amanda so request in that last will?" Eyes on a pelican fishing in shallow water, he accused:

"You haven't answered Jed's letters notifying you that the amount of income you had been receiving from my aunt's estate would be deposited monthly to your account as usual. I had to come to find out if you had received them."

Brooke sprang to her feet. Her beach coat slipped off. Slim and golden-skinned in her white water-frock, she dug pink toes into the hot sand.

"I didn't answer because you both know without being told that I won't touch that money."

Mark Trent loomed over her. "Put this on again," he commanded grimly. "Why won't you touch that money?"

Brooke thrust her arms into the beach coat he held and stuck her unsteady hands into the pockets.

"Would you take a cent of Mary Amanda Dane's when I thought it mine? Didn't you say it that snobby voice of yours the afternoon we met in Jed Stewart's office?"

"Hope you'll enjoy the house and fortune," Miss Reyburn. Now it's my turn:

"I hope you'll enjoy the house and fortune," Mr. Trent. I'm sure Daphne Field will be crazy about it."

"Daphne!" He caught her wrist in a grip which hurt. "Where did you get that crazy idea?"

How crude, how unbelievably crude she had been to mention Daphne's name, Brooke accused herself hotly. But, having blundered, she'd better see it through with the light touch.

"From a letter from Mrs. Gregory the other day. It was full of news, all about Mark Trent and Daphne Field, the current lady of his heart. She's a grand gossip."

Mark Trent's eyes drew Brooke's like a magnet. Was the light in his laughter?

"Anne Gregory is more than a gossip; she's a strategist. I haven't spoken to Daphne Field since the night of the play and she knows it." He loosened his hold on her wrist. "What are you doing this afternoon?"

Interpreters of the Mode

SO LONG as you Sew Your Own, Milady, just so long will Yours Truly strive to interpret the mode for you. Today the trio brings you frocks for every size (from four years to size 52) for almost any occasion. Each has been designed to bring you the ultimate in style in its particular class and all claim a new high in simplicity and comfort.

Ultra-Smart Dress.

It's nice to know you're easy to look at even if the occasion is only another breakfast session. That's why the ultra-smart dress at the left is so handy to have. Note the clever detail all the way through even to the inverted skirt pleat. See how beautifully the sleeves set-in—you just know at a glance how simple it is to put together. Cotton, of course, is the material.

Typical of Youth.

The surest way to be a big little-body is to wear dresses that are as expertly planned as the grown-ups'. The little number above, center, has the smart styling of a sub-deb's frock. It is typical of youth's freshness and activity, and is one model that gets little girls' complete endorsement. It is the number one dress for the number one sweetheart in anybody's family.

An Orchid to You.

Do you think of a charming sorority tea with lots of atmosphere and plenty of style when you look at the handsome new two-piece above, right? Would you like it made in one color and material, or perhaps with a topper in gold lame or satin combined with a skirt of a rich dull fabric? Why not make it yourself to suit your own fancy and step into a swell little world of glamour crowded with fans and fun and festivity?

The Patterns.

Pattern 1401 is designed for sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material.

Pattern 1366 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2½ yards of 39-inch material, plus 1¾ yards of machine-made pleating to trim, as pictured.

Pattern 1396 is designed for

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Towel Holders.—Either a spring-type clothespin, or the paper clamp from a loose-leaf notebook, properly nailed to the wall makes a satisfactory towel hanger for the basement.

Keeping Boards From Warping.—Warping of long boards can be prevented to a considerable extent by standing them on end or on one edge so both sides are equally exposed to the weather.

Cooking Doughnuts.—Doughnuts will crack and brown before they are thoroughly cooked inside if they contain too much flour or if the fat in which they are fried is not hot enough.

Tomato Marmalade.—Half cup vinegar, one cup sugar, one quart chopped tomatoes, one teaspoon mixed spices, one teaspoon salt. Cook together until thoroughly dissolved. Pour into shallow pan and cook in slow oven for one and a quarter hours. Turn into sterilized jars and cover with paraffin while hot.

IT'S IN THE NEWS!

There are two classes of news in these columns every week: (1) Interesting stories, about events all over the world; and (2) the advertisements. Yes, the advertisements are news, and in many ways the most important of all, because they affect you more directly and personally than any other.

A new and better method of refrigeration is devised—and you learn about it through advertisements. Improvements are added to automobiles which make them safer than ever—again advertisements carry the story. Styles change in clothing—and advertisements rush the news to your doorstep. A manufacturer finds a way to lower the price on his products—he advertises to tell you about the savings.

You'll find that it pays to follow this news every week. Reading the advertisements is the sure way to keep abreast of the world . . . to learn of new comforts and conveniences . . . to get full money's worth for every dollar you spend.

sizes 32 to 44. Size 34 requires 1½ yards of 39-inch material for the blouse, 1½ yards of 54-inch material for the skirt.

YOU CAN THROW CARDS IN HIS FACE ONCE TOO OFTEN

WHEN you have those awful cramps; when your nerves are all on edge—don't take it out on the man you love.

Your husband can't possibly know how you feel for the simple reason that he is a man.

A three-quarter wife may be no wife at all if she nags her husband seven days out of every month.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife; take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Home Heating Hints

By John Barclay Heating Expert

Building Furnace Fire Is Easy Operation When You Follow Few Simple Rules

IT'S really no trick to build a good furnace fire quickly and easily.

Leave a layer of ashes about two inches deep spread on the grates. Spread about two inches of coal over this layer of ashes. Over the coal, place a generous amount of kindling—newspapers and light, dry wood.

The turn damper in the smoke pipe and the ashpit damper should be open wide. If the ashpit damper on your furnace is in back, open it and also the ashpit door in front. This assures maximum draft and quick ignition.

When the kindling is burning well, add fresh coal gradually. In this way you get a deep fire in little time—the kindling burning the coal beneath it, and the fire, in turn, igniting the coal above it. From time to time, add additional fuel until you have a solid, deep fire. When this is done, check your dampers and close the ashpit door.

Should the kindling while igniting smoke a bit through the furnace door crevices, it is due to the chimney being cold and not providing enough draft to carry off the smoke. This is easily overcome by wadding a bit of newspaper, lighting it, and inserting it into the check damper. This heats the air, creating a draft in the flue pipe and chimney and carries the smoke away.

Resolve Alone

Never tell your resolution beforehand; but when the cast is thrown, play it as well as you can to win the game you are at.—Selden.

Nobleness

'Tis more noble to forgive, and more manly to despise, than to revenge an injury. — Benjamin Franklin.

Hold Secrets

The truly wise man should have no keeper of his secret but himself.—Guizot.

The Unattained

Success is counted sweetest by those who ne'er succeed.—Dickinson.

"Quotations"

The true scholar is the most practical person in the world, because he spends his time adjusting himself to reality in accordance with the evidence, and he knows what the evidence is. — Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler.

To the eyes of art as to the eyes of affection, the unessential of life do not count.—Thornton Wilder.

About eighteen friends and relatives gathered in the Moss home
last Wednesday evening to help Mrs.
Moss celebrate her birthday. Cards were played and luncheon was served.

Combining of beans is in full swing in this neighborhood, the weather being favorable, some machines work after dark using head lights on the tractors. The beans are running good and are of good quality.

Miss Marianne Moss spent Sunday with her parents.

Early Monday morning found our leading business men out with scrub brushes and kerosene removing the wax and soap from their windows due to the Halloween pranks.

Girls basketball practice began Tuesday evening with still some vacancies.

Glenn Moss who accidentally shot
thru his foot with his rifle two weeks ago, is improving.

The R. N. A. are sponsoring a card and bunco party November 17
in the school gym at 8:15 sharp.
Among the prizes will be a door prize.

Mrs. C. Goesel entertained the Tinley Park bunco club.

Last Friday eleven friends of Mrs.
Jarmark gathered in her home to wish her bon voyage on her trip to Germany. Bunco was played and prizes awarded to each player. Refreshments were served. Mrs. Jar-mark left Tuesday for a three months visit with relatives in Germany.

Mrs. Louis Goesel spent the week end in Niles, Mich., at her summer cottage.

The Garden Department of the Tinley Park Woman's Club will meet Tuesday Nov. 9 at 2:00 o'clock in the home of Mrs. Frank Baldwin.
Topics for discussion will be: "Hardy Chrysanthemums" and "Bulbs to bloom from Christmas to Easter."

The following friends from Chicago gathered in the Fred W. Nits-sche home October 24 and helped them celebrate the 15th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Nitsche:
Mr. and Mrs. Louis Schultz and family, Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Torstensen,
Mr. and Mrs. Carl Dyer and Mr. and Mrs. Don Pedro. A good time was enjoyed. Many lovely gifts of crystal were given to the honored couple.

"FOR PETE'S SAKE"

Hi Every Body!
Here's just a little inside dope on this here now play business.

First off: Aunt Sarah is too all-fired stuck up, and look out for her temper.

Pete's bunions bother him quite a lot and Bill thinks he's a foot ball hero.

Mrs. Clarkston "my deah", would like to be "il" in society "poor deah".
Now dear ol' Jasmine has her big mouth into every thing and she's always buttin' in. But shucks if I tell any more why you'll know every thing so all I can say is—dout miss
"For Pete's Sake."

Bye everybody,

The Ladies Aid of the Trinity Lutheran church will hold their annual supper and bazaar in the Saen-ger hall on November 18.

The following were prize winners at the Tinley Park Business Men's award last Saturday night:

Wm. Rauch won the $10 prize.
George Marquardt $5; Fred Manzie
$5, Peter Wannemacher $2 Virginia
Rensink $1.

The talking movie picture shown at the Tinley Park school last Saturday night drew an extra good crowd and the pictures were well received.

Miss Ruth Ceithamel daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Ceithamel underwent an appendicitis operation in the St. Francis hospital in Blue Island last Thursday. She is improving slowly.

The Tinley Park Royal Neighbors will hold a card and bunco party in the Tinley Park public school on the evening of Nov. 17th. Everyone is invited.

Dr. Schultz has gone on a trip to Florida and expects to be away until November 15.

The village board met in their semi-monthly meeting Monday night.
Only routine business was transacted.

Miss Lee Schoeneck is ill with Scarlet Fever.

The Tinley Park Fire Department
held their regular monthly meeting Tuesday night. They are planning on sending a committee to Kenosha.
Wisconsin next Sunday to look over some new type fire trucks at the factory making this kind of fire fighting apparatus. Bids have already come in for purchasing the old Tinley fire truck soon as it is ready to be put up for sale.

The new beauty parlor of Miss Doris Miller was opened to the public last Saturday. The new parlor is known as "Doris Beauty Shoppe" and is located on the second floor
over the Hirsch Bros. funeral home on Oak Park Avenue.

John Bettenhausen who underwent an appendicitis operation in the Blue Island hospital a week ago is improving nicely.

Postmaster Paul Rauhoff has received a newsy letter from Roman-Gonia former Tinley druggist now located at Ojibwa, Wis. that the weather is quite cold there and that he is kept busy chopping wood which is being used in place of coal.

Wm. Funk, Wilbert Funk, Henry
Vogt, and James English returned Wednesday from a fishing trip to Bath, Illinois along the Illinois river.
As the weather was quite warm down there, the hunting trip did not produce much game.

Musical Training Made Possible For Mokena Children

The following letter has been mailed to the parents of the Mokena public school students who passed a recent musical test given at the school:

To The Parents Of The Mokena
School Children:

Musical training is available for your boy or girl in the Mokena school band. Have you given any thought to this important phase of your child's education?

The child who learns to play an instrument learns discipline co-operation with others, and new way to a fuller, richer life. An instrument puts him into worth-while school activities, it keeps him off the street,
it gives him something interesting,
pleasurable and worthwhile to do during his leisure time.

As the result of a musical aptitude test recently given to pupils in grades 4 to 10, recommendations for more musical activity are being made to the parents of those child-

Miss Zaletta Holt,
New Lenox Weds
Axel Peterson

Miss Zaletta Holt, daughter of Mr.
and Doctor Jeanette Holt of New Lenox and Mr. Norman Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Peterson, of New Lenox, were married in the Wesley Methodist church parsonage
at Aurora, Ill., Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock by the Rev. Stewart
White who performed the ceremony.
Mr. and Mrs. Donald Gray of Joliet were the only attendants.

The bride was dressed in medium blue velvet with matching accessories
and wore a corsage of tea roses;
while Mrs. Gray wore tulle crepe, with matching accessories and carried a corsage of talisman roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Twin Elms in Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson are residing in Chicago.

Miss Nellie Hafka,
of New Lenox
Weds Iowa Man

Miss Nellie Hafka, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hafka of New Lenox, and Mr. Marlin Coates, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Andrews of Waterloo, Iowa, were united in marriage Thursday afternoon October 21 in the parsonage of the St.
Peter Evangelical church in Frankfort at four o'clock by the Rev. G.
S. Gerhold.

The bride was attired in a beaver brown alpaca crepe creation with green accessories and a corsage of brown chrysanthemums.

Miss Irene Hafka attended her sister and was dressed in green alpaca crepe with brown accessories and wore a corsage of brown chrysanthemums. Kenneth Andrews of Waterloo, Iowa served his brother as best man.

Following the ceremony, a dinner was served in the home of the bride's parents, to the members of the immediate families. The table was decorated with brown and yellow chrysanthemums and a large wedding cake in the center.

After spending a week with friends and relatives here and in Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Coates left for Waterloo, Iowa where they will make their future home.

Tennis Played by Romans

The Romans had a game of tennis, which they called pia, but even before the Romans, Calen, an old Greek medical gentleman, had written of it to the effect that it was in his time a healthful exercise, and quite nice. Herodotus thinks it was first played by Lybians, in the reign of King Attyx, many years before Christ was born. It has been called
"the king of games."

Responsibility and Failure Side-stepping responsibility would make a fitting epitaph for most of the people who fail to get on in the world, to contribute anything to society—people who never achieve independence, never make anything of themselves.

Unit of Measure Called Candy Candy or kandy is a measure of pounds.

ren who rated in the test. This method of discovering talent is proving successful wherever it is used since only those boys and girls who can recognize rhythm and pitch are encouraged to take up an instrument.

We have made special arrangements with a reliable music company to rent instruments to you. You may choose any kind you wish. Your child may try it for three months at a low rental. At the end of that time you may return it without further obligation or you may keep it.
The rental already paid applying on its purchase, and easy monthly payments being arranged for the balance, if you so desire.

A meeting of the parents and pupils interested will be held in the auditorium Tuesday November 9 from 7:45 to 9:30 p. m. All types of instruments will be on display,
and you will have a chance to confer with the director concerning the instruments best suited to your child.

One of the main contributions of Methodism to Christianity has been its fervor and its spirit. This has resulted because of a belief on the part of the church in an evangelizing gospel that has made Christianity a working factor in the lives of both young and old. This year is the 200th anniversary of the experience of John Wesley which later led to the development of our church. We are not celebrating this year but rather are observing it by striving to again renew the spirit of its founder. This means the preaching of an evangelistic gospel at services that are conducted for the young as well as for the old. Let us make our worship services truly those of Family Worship. The children and youth of today need the experience of sitting with their parents in the recognized presence of God.

Visit the church with the friendly spirit.

H. L. WILLIAMSON NEW PRESIDENT ILL., PRESS ASSO.

H. L. Williamson, publisher of the Printing Industry and National Printer Journalist, Springfield, and secretary of the Illinois Press Association for the past 22 years, was unanimously elected president of the association for 1937-1938 at the closing sessions of the 72nd annual convention and journalism conference in Champaign-Urbana, Saturday, October 30. Other officers elected were: Don B. Pauschert, Pana Weekly News, first vice president; G. C. Terry, Tri-County Press, Polo, 2nd vice president; Byron K. LeCrone, Effingham Daily Record and Weekly Democrat, 3rd vice president and Arthur M. Morgan, Rantoul Press and Chanute Field News, treasurer. Curtis G. Small, Harrisburg Daily Register, was named temporary secretary by the executive committee. A permanent secretary will be appointed within the near future or as soon as satisfactory arrangements can be worked out with the University of Illinois for the office to be operated in conjunction with the College of Journalism.

Mr. Williamson, who was first elected secretary of the Illinois Press Association in 1915, has seen the membership grow from 36 when he took office to 112 when he retired as secretary. At the spring meeting in Chicago last May when Mr. Williamson announced his resignation to take effect at the annual meeting this fall, members of the association presented him with a gold watch in recognition of his 22 years of service to the organization. The Illinois Press Association is now the oldest and the largest state press association in the United States, having been founded in 1865. Mr. Williamson is the publisher of The Printing Industry, a controlled circulation publication for the graphic arts and allied trades, with a distribution of 60,000 copies monthly; in addition he also publishes National Printer Journalist, the oldest trade journal for newspaper publishers and printers in the United States, having been founded in 1882 by Father Herbert, who first formed the National Editorial Association at about the same time.

In his secretary's report for the past year, Mr. Williamson proposed a Gold Star Membership Plan for members of the Illinois Press Association who pay dues annually and attend all conventions of the organization for a five-year period. To a large gold star may be added smaller stars to represent the five-year period over a number of years.

and in his illustrated feature articles which appear in this newspaper he relates for our readers those little-known chapters in American history which afford fascinating sidelights on the building of the nation. History is his specialty but not all of his articles deal with historical subjects. He also writes on popular science, on literature and the fine arts and on many other subjects of current interest. Teachers find his articles valuable for supplementary use in their classes and you will find them so interesting and informative that you will want to tell your friends about them.

Gates to White House Grounds
There are eight gateways to the White House grounds, all opposite to the various entrances.

Growth of the Banana Plant
The banana plant grows to the height of a small tree and produces one bunch of bananas in eight months' time. To get the bunch of bananas, the plant is cut down with a machete—a long knife used for many purposes by the natives. The green bunch of bananas is then cut from the plant and handled carefully till it reaches the ship which takes the bananas to world markets. Every banana plant has a small plant beside it—a mother plant and its child. The child becomes the plant giving the next crop. Bananas are not allowed to ripen on the plant, as they would burst open and be unfit to eat.

The United States Constitution
The United States Constitution is the basis of government in this country and is the highest and most permanent law. It was adopted September 17, 1787, by the federal convention and ratified the following year. It may be amended by a vote of two-thirds in congress, followed by the approval of three-quarters of the state legislatures or state conventions. It specifies how congress and the President are elected, the powers and duties of President, congress and the judiciary and the relation between state and federal governments.

In a prominent section of Palos Park stands a fine old farm house, formerly owned by Paul Cornell one of the early Chicagoans. This building now belongs to Anne M. Heagney's family. Miss Heagney is a teacher of Calumet High school. At one time the former owner of the home possessed much of the Hyde Park territory. Cornell avenue was named after him. The Cornell descendants now own the hotel named the Hyde Park hotel.

Mr. E. F. Downey, Calumet high school principal is quite amazed at the number of twins entering Calumet. Calumet has been reported to be overcrowded. It has the total of 4,328 students but what can be expected when the students are sent in 2's? Calumet has a record in Chicago schools by having thirty sets of twins. Mr. Downey is fearful of the time when they will send quintts.

The twins are now organizing a club. Some of the twins are Catherine and Helen Rattray; Charlotte and Charles Norton, Eleanor and Alice Hein; Florence and Evelyn Burke; Caroline and Mary Sorenson.

Joanne and Richard Irwin; DeLee and Robert Conlon; Edward and Bill Kardek; Doris and Donald Engstrom; Robert and Rosemary Daley; Genevieve and Gertrude Kunka; Betty and Bonnie Allee; Margaret and Lillian Bischoff; Caroline and Josephine DeMay; Lois and Leona Harder; LaVerne and Viola Baumback; Bill and Edward Gilis; George and Justyne Parrish; Elinor and Evelyn Helbig; and Josephine and Dorothy Berndt.

Others are: Ed and Albert Thorson; Anna and Veronica Vail; Anthony and Joseph Marvinac; Florence and Evelyn Burke and the Gleason twins.

Chicago Auto Show Begins November 6

The classic among the nation's automobile shows, Chicago's 38th annual, will greet the public Saturday Nov. 6 and continue for a week thru Nov. 13 at the International Amphitheatre, Halsted and 43rd Streets.

All of the glamor, brilliance and swift-moving action in the big arena and in 124 exhibits thru out the Amphitheatre will combine to honor the 1938 products of motordom, including passenger cars, trailers, trucks, accessories and maintenance equipment.

Supplementing the "Fashions of the World" revue in the central arena will be the new cars on the second floor, of which 24 makes and 200 models will be shown; the trailer section with 21 makes and 70 models, and the truck division of 9 makes and 56 models—more than 300 units all told.

In addition, the accessory and parts industry will account for 65 displays, augmented by such educational features as the winning high school student safety posters and slogans in a contest conducted by Mayor Kelly's Chicago Safe Committee; a trailer camp, and a diorama depicting the evolution of highway transportation during the past hundred years.

Many human appeals are combined in the production. For instance, the passenger cars are linked with beautiful women, evening gowns and $250,000 worth of furs, all of which are ideally harmonized as to color. Then, too there is the fast moving action, brilliant stage effects and originality of the "Fashions of the World" revue, presenting with dazzling theatrical effects, yet having a definite purpose in serving to glorify the new passenger cars.

Further fascination is provided by the special animated exhibits in the car section on the second floor, the trailer and accessory divisions in the north wing of the first floor, and the truck group in the south wing. Scores or ramps and stairways within and surrounding the central arena make it a simple matter to visit both the first and second floor exhibits.

Twenty national groups have picked their choicest feminine types to participate in the "Fashions of the World" presentations each afternoon and evening. Dignitaries of those countries are also co-operating thru their presence at performances.

In continuity, the "Fashions of the World" revue first presents various makes of passenger cars, and the "voice from the sky" tells briefly the salient talking points of each. The dramatics then swing to a rising curtain which reveals a 40-foot high globe weighing four tons. As the globe revolves and stops at each nation, three comely young women, one attired in the native costume of that country, one garbed in formal evening gown and the other in furs, descend thru unique cloud effects and enter the cars awaiting them, to the accompaniment of Cavallo's famous symphonic band, which also plays an important part thru out the presentation.

Tell Him What You've Found to Be True

● Tell him of the value, educationally, he will derive from reading this noted feature writer's historical articles as they appear regularly in this paper. He will probably say: "Sure, I like history, Pop, but . . ." But too often it's ponderous and drained of the vitality that makes history the stirring story that it is. Then reveal to him the skill with which this man makes dramatic phases of his country's history read like lively fiction.

● Show him that Mr. Watson's articles sometimes digress to other fields of American interest—to popular science, sports, the fine arts, industry, literature—to developments that will MAKE history . . . but read like romance.

Seed Corn Selection

In the consideration of the practice of seed corn selection, and reviewing the type and characters of the ear we favored and kept for seed, we covered last week the complex ancestry of open pollinated corn. In the ancestors of the mother side, which we call the seed line, we might remember the types of plants we selected the ears from (if our custom were to also examine the stalk the ear grew upon, as well as the type of ear itself. But we had no way of knowing the types of plants the pollen sprang from, or how many pollinators were involved in the pollination of a single ear. Considerable of the pollen might have come from barren or earless stalks, as was always evidenced by the fact that our fields contained earless plants. If the pollinator ancestry included barren stalks - a visible characteristic - how many other undesirable characters, such as disease susceptibility, mubbin ears, or deficient root systems, might be included and inherited. We had no way of passing on one-half of the inherited characteristics.

Hence, in commenting on open pollinated seed corn selection there is not as much to be said about things we could not help as those that we control in the standards that guided our ear selection. Therefore, let us review the general concept of the ideal ear that was followed in this region.

The ear, of course, had to be among the largest, and rank with the heaviest in weight. An appearance character that was outstanding in its general acceptance was the complete covering of cob tip with kernels. A cob that was not completely covered, regardless of other appearance characters, was usually rejected.

What is a corn cob and what is its purpose in nature in corn growth? It is a cylindrical rack, we might say, on which nature produces the corn kernels and with its vital nutrition tubes that convey food to the kernel within in the most protected position of the cob structure, so vital are these feeding tubes. Our interest in the cob should be most concerned in that it always provide sufficient space on which kernels can be placed to take care of all the kernels that the plant food available to, and acquired by, the plant, can produce in number and size. Where then we demanded a complete covering of the cob it meant that the provision for the development of the kernels should always be a little less than the supply of plant food would make necessary, and hence crowd the kernels to the tip of the cob so as to make the picturesque ear tip that constituted the primary feature that was demanded in ear we selected. Thus, in any given year we limited inherited cob length to the varying soil plant food supply of a given year, and discarded and excluded any inheritance features of a greater cob provision for years when plant food supply might have been greater than the year when the selection was made.

Each year, therefore, that happened to be low plant food year we stepped down in inherited cob lengths, selecting shorter cobs in order that the kernels developed by that year's plant food might cover the tip and thus automatically over a long period of years have been shortening the ear lengths until now, if we should visit the cribs of those that have had the ruling voice in seed selection in this picture tip system we would find the average cob length of little over 5 or 6 inches.

This shortening of cob length would not be so serious if other vital plant characteristics were not closely related to it or tied in with it. Let us again consider cob structure; a bundle of parallel feeding tubes within a cylindrical rack, upon which kernels are placed. There is a tube for each kernel, the kernel being on a loop of the tube, the outer end of this tube constituting the silk through which impregnation occurs by the pollen that enters the outer end of the tube. The other end of the tube extends back through the cob and ear shank, down through the tube system of the stalk and the lower end of which tube constitutes a separate root system in the soil, having its separate root hairs, through which nutrition is gathered and conveyed by the tube to the loop where the kernel is formed.

We can see that the number of tubes within the cob is greatest at the butt as the tube ends beyond the kernel are outside - the silk, - therefore, approaching the tip of the cob there should naturally be a tapering of the cob because of less tubes within in the most useful cob. We can now see that the cob can be considered a section of a tubular system that carries on portions of the closely related work of nutrition, and that a short section would most likely represent a shorter tube system or shorter tube length, including a shorter root system.

Further in all life there tends to be a balance of functions and in the shorter corn cob adjusted to shorter rows of kernels there would be a reduced system for the gathering of the nutrition therefor from the soil. With the shorter cob that we were selecting in order to get the tip covered we were automatically and unconsciously getting shorter root systems until we finally developed a plant that did not have enough root anchorage left to hold the plant erect at the time of its maturity.

Those of us whose memories go back to the beginning of the style of picture tips remember the erect stalks with less lodging and how, as boys, when we attempted to catch up with the hog that had broken into the corn field we had a fair chance of overtaking it, but now if we watch the other fellow chasing it we would bet on the hog.

We must of course have in mind that experimental information on the correlation of plant characters is most recent and it is only within the past few years with the development of hybrid corn that we have learned that extensive root systems were the outstanding feature of yield capacity.

It is possible in the development and selection of inbreds from which our better strains of hybrid corn are bred and developed to pick inbreds of extensive root structure. And we find this associated with the longer cob as illustrated in the recent Thomson's Top-Yield Hybrid fields on Lincoln Highway, in Frankfort township. The deep and extensive rooting of these plants was evidenced in several ways. The plants showed a peculiar live green color throughout the drought period illustrating getting water from low depths. The plant cell sap still had a high sugar concentration at maturity as shown by its frost resistance during the first five frosts of the season and remaining alive and which was further illustrated by the green color of stalks and the sweet juices within up to early October and a considerable time after the first frost on Sept. 19.

We can recall in previous articles in this paper reference to the two dominant periods in the corn plants life; first vegetative or nutrition gathering period which closes with fertilization, and the translocative period moving the earlier acquisition of gathered root reserves to the ear and in which process the nutrition roots are absorbed. Consequently when the plant stands erect at maturity it means likely two things, first, that the reserves gathered by the nutrition roots were in sufficient abundance to complete maturity and yet not suffer complete absorption, the plant having ample nutrition gathering power through its extensive root system. Second the erect stalk evidences that the water vascular roots were very deep if, after absorption of the outer ends of the nutrition root system these vertical water feeding roots could largely alone hold the plant erect. Many visitors to the Thomson Hybrid fields will recall that in the middle of October following maturing of the corn that often efforts by one man unassisted to pull the plants out of the soil were unsuccessful because of deep anchorage. This points out the advantage in visiting the seed field in Hybrid Seed selection.

Public Service To Declare Dividend

Common stockholders of Public Service Company of Northern Illinois of record November 10th will be entitled to receive a special dividend of 80c a share on December 1st.

Commonwealth Edison Company stockholders of record November 10 will be entitled to receive a special dividend of 31 1/4c a share on December 1st.

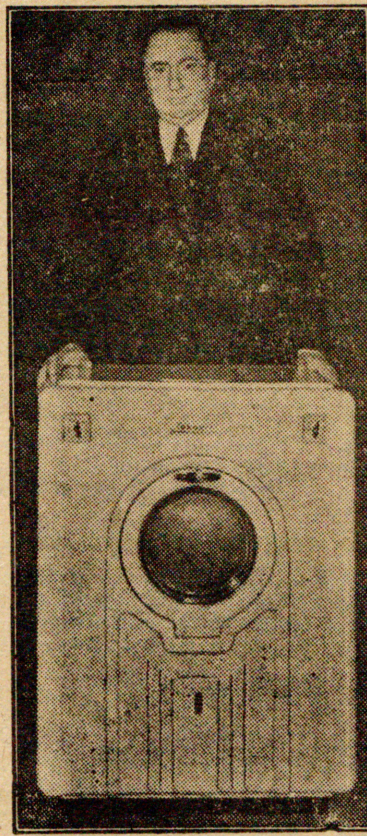

Therefore, the common stockholder of Public Service Company who exchanges his stock for three shares of Edison on or before November 10th will receive 13 3/4c a share, of Public Service Common, more than he otherwise would receive on December 1st the special dividend of 31 1/4c per Edison share, or $1.25 for each share of Public Service preferred stock exchanged.

As of October 28th, Commonwealth Edison Company had in hand 81.9 percent of the common stock of Public Service Company and 70.4 percent of the total of common and preferred shares of that company. These figures would be increased to 84 percent and 72.1 percent, respectively, if there are included the additional shares of Public Service common, expected to be exchanged, which are involved in the so-called bank settlement concerning assets pledged by Insull Utility Investments Inc. and Corporation Securities Co. of Chicago.

Over 12,000 Trips To Calif.

Passengers on all five trains of the Golden State Limited fleet of the Rock Island Lines were guests Tuesday November 2, at a "birthday party" in the diners in commemoration of the 35th anniversary of the operation of this train which was inaugurated November 2, 1902. In addition to other features, specially prepared "birthday" cakes were served with tea, under the supervision of T. D. Wickham, superintendent of dining cars. Similar observance were carried out on the Southern Pacific line over which the Golden State operates thru Arizona and California. The departure of the Golden State Limited from LaSalle Station, Chicago at 9:15 Tuesday evening, marked the 12,775 trip of this train to the Pacific Coast.

New Home Laundry Make Wash Day History

The history of Wash Day, be it Monday, Tuesday or any other day of the week, is the story of the emancipation of women from an arduous and seemingly inevitable task, now, however, made so scientifically efficient that it is a time of relative ease.

Since those far off days when tribal women knelt to rub clothes laboriously on flat rocks in streams and pools, there have been three important stages in the evolution of washing equipment. First, came the washboard and tub; then the hand-operated washer and after that the electric washing machine. And now the newest cycle in this development according to Clarence E. Beagley of Orland Park, is the Bendix home laundry, an automotive appliance that eliminates all labor from Wash Day.

This new machine requires only that it be loaded and unloaded, all pre-soaking, washing, rinsing and drying for the line being governed by two simple electric dials which also regulate temperature of water. Time and effort saved for the housewife is unprecedented, said Mr. Beagley, adding that the economic value of leisure thus added in the household is incalculable.

More attention to other household duties, to the children, to leisure reading, sports and social activities will be possible thru this mechanical laundry, a product of the engineering laboratories of Bendix Home Appliances, Inc. of South Bend, Ind., represented here by Mr. Clarence E. Beagley.

Thus the transition of fifty years. In 1880, for instance, said Mr. Beagley, washing was a laborious job, but help was cheap and folks were not too fussy. Profits for the home laundering market went to the washboard manufacturers. The year 1890 found the milking stool serving a new purpose but with a new name—the "dolly washer." This piece of equipment was a modified stool, carrying a handle resembling that of a butter-churn, the "dolly" being used to pound agitation into clothes in a wood tub.

Ten years after that came the "dolly" washing machine, being the stool with a curved handle that turned semi-circularly on a pivot in the center of the tub. With the tub churn, came the "cylinder" washing machine which "tumbled" the clothes in a perforated metal drum inside a metal tub. Stout shoulders and a heavy hand on a curved handle supplied the power for agitation.

The year 1912 saw electricity substituted for muscle power on the cylinder machines, and the World War years saw the appearance of the power-driven swinging wringer. The labor of Wash Day was somewhat relieved, although clothes had to be handled just as much as ever—soaking, washing, rinsing, wringing.

With the new Bendix home laundry, only two moves are necessary: loading and unloading the machine. With the addition of soap, the home laundry automatically goes thru all the stages necessary for thoroughness, while the housewife occupies herself with other things, leaving the machine alone to shut itself off again automatically, when the clothes are washed and rinsed clean. In such a house Wash Day is only an incident in the week.

Bread As Staff of Life

Bread, in some form or another, is one of the most ancient forms of food. In the Old Testament there are numerous references to the "staff of life." Edward Winslow, in 1624, wrote "Corn, which is the staff of life," etc., and Swift's "Tale of a Tub" speaks of bread as the staff of life.

The Way Towards Sound Recovery

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

In recent weeks America has heard and read frequent expressions of disappointment over the failure of many of its optimistic expectations to be fulfilled.

Despite numerous promises, unemployment remains an unsolved problem; the costs of living continue to rise; and productive enterprise has not measured up to anticipations.

In various fields confidence seems to lag.

Naturally America wonders why.

Naturally it wonders just what Government can do to remedy these conditions and to renew that surge of energetic confidence on which our people once rode to heights of achievement and well-being.

The problem is a difficult one—but these facts seem apparent.

Government, by direct edict, cannot reduce the price of all necessities—but it can reduce such wastes as create high taxes, and with them high cost of living.

Government, by direct edict, cannot effectively increase production—but it can adopt an attitude of encouragement rather than discouragement of the productive enterprises on which recovery depends.

Government, by direct edict, cannot end unemployment—but it can stimulate, rather than burden, those job-creating activities which increase employment opportunities.

These things, as recent European history has proved, are not achieved by loading down a nation with confusing laws and multitudes of politically appointed job-holders.

They are, as American history has proved, achieved by encouraging that spirit of enterprise which enabled our people to conquer forest and desert, and to build the United States into the greatest, freest and most progressive nation on earth.

They are achieved by the American method of clearing the road to recovery—not by obstructing it.

Pewter Candle Molds

Pewter candle molds came into use about 1760 or 1770 and continued to be used extensively until about 50 years ago. Previously the common method of making candles was by dipping the tallow-coated wick until successive layers had brought the candle to the desired thickness.

Tinley Dealer Lands Westinghouse Refrigerator Line

The new 1938 line of electric refrigerators recently announced by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., with streamline design, gleaming white porcelain or dux finish, and many exclusive conveniences and refinements that will catch the eye of all seekers for extra features, are the most beautiful, convenient and efficient refrigerator in Westinghouse history, according to Mr. Henry Bettenhausen Tinley Park refrigerator dealer.

These new Westinghouse models said Mr. Bettenhausen, "bear the distinction of being the result of tests in over a hundred home proving kitchens, under all imaginable conditions in all parts of the world. Suggestions as to improvements in the design of the refrigerators were gathered from the Kitchen Proving Hostesses and have been incorporated in the new models."

Outstanding among the new features are the large covered meat storage compartment, glass top humidor for extra large quantities of vegetables and fruits, super capacity froster for additional frozen storage room and a new zone control and finger tip dial for exact temperature selection.

Other features and refinements found in the 1938 Westinghouse models include the new specially designed Ex-press tray lifts make the Westinghouse Ejecto-o-Cube trays more efficient and convenient than ever. The trays can be loosened from the shelf with a slight touch of the finger. Improved cube releases the ice cubes from the tray instantly.

Adjustable height storage shelves permit large containers to be put in the food compartment without crowding. Adjust-o-shelves slide in and out easily and new closely grids improved smooth footing for dishes and jars.

"The complete line, consisting of 20 models, offers a model for every size, type of family, and income," says Mr. Bettenhausen. "The storage capacity varies from 3.2 cubic feet to 20 cubic feet. They have accessory food-saver dishes of delphinium blue that can be placed in an oven if desired, as they are impervious to temperature changes. Also, a delphinium blue water server which is conveniently located on a foldaway shelf, can be tilted up against the side of the compartment to make room for tall bottles.

The graceful, flowing cabinet line rounded corners, polished chromium filling, combine to form a beauty ensemble that will modernize any kitchen.

MOKENA

Mrs. John Marti spent last week end at Champaign, Ill., visiting her brother, Edw. Nelson, who is attending the University of Illinois. While there she saw the Illinois-Mich. Homecoming game with her brother and parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Nelson of Joliet.

Complacent—Complaisant

A person showing satisfaction or who is pleased with himself is complacent; one who allows freedom to others is complaisant. Flattery was meat and drink to Uncle Charles, who sat with a complaisant smile as he listened to his praises being sung. Aunt Emily was in a complaisant mood, and allowed us to play in her garden.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

ORLAND PARK

The Orland Park Child Welfare Clinic will be held Wednesday Nov. 10 in the school auditorium at 2 p. m., sharp. Dr. Boyle and nurse Phelan will be in charge, assisted by Mrs. Geo. Cox.

The Orland Park PTA will hold their monthly meeting Thursday November 18. Everyone is cordially invited to attend. After the business meeting there will be dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Smith are vacationing in Nebraska. They will visit in the home of the latter's mother and other relatives and friends.

Hallowe'en passed off very quietly this year with no deceptions being reported.

James Creer is having a new air conditioning and heating system installed in his residence. Clarence Beagley, local heating contractor is doing the work.

John Helenhouse, Orland Park fire chief who was seriously injured in a recent auto accident, continues to improve.

Orland Park will have three basketball teams playing this season. Two of the teams sponsored by Mr. and Mrs. Ray Brennan, will play at Mokena this Friday night.

The Adult Bible class of the M. E. church will meet Nov. 10. Place of meeting will be announced at the church service Sunday morning.

The Junior RNA will meet Friday Nov. 12 in the home of Miss Ruth Ludwig.

The St. Michael's church is planning a poultry bazaar for the near future.

U. S. Marines To Seek Men Here

Word has been received from Lieutenant Colonel A. B. Miller, officer in charge of the central recruiting division, that a recruiting sergeant of the U. S. marine corps will be Post Office, Joliet, Ill., between the hours of 12:00 a. m. and 4:00 p. m. on November 8, 1937, to interview men between the ages of 18 and 30 who are interested in enlisting.

The enlistment is for 4 years. After passing a physical examination is accepted and completed a six weeks training course, the marines are sent to many different places, among which are China, Canal Zone, Hawaii, Cuba etc., and also a number of interesting places on both coasts.

Exhibit At Live Stock Show

Three Will county farm boys, Leonard Budde of Joliet; Robt. Weber of Lockport and Irvin Krapf of Peotone will exhibit in the junior classes of the 1937 International Live Stock Exposition.

Budde and Weber will show baby beebes and Krapf will exhibit in the swine classes of the exposition's junior live stock feeding contest, in which baby beebes, lambs and pigs are shown by boys and girls between the ages of ten and twenty.

The International Live Stock Show will be held this year November 27 to December 4. It will be the 38th anniversary of this premier exhibition of live stock and farm products.

According to officials of the show, Illinois boys and girls from 29 counties have listed entries for this event to date.

Huskies Available—Several experienced bushel huskies are registered, either stay nights or go.

Used to Threats

Lincoln began getting letters threatening his life soon after being nominated for the presidency and correspondence of this nature kept coming in to the very end of his life. Asked once if he didn't find them rather uncomfortable to think of, Lincoln replied, "Oh, there is nothing like getting used to things!"

He Couldn't Keep a Secret

It is related that Benjamin Franklin had to have two of the Constitutional convention delegates accompany him after every session of the convention. It was to prevent the eccentric Franklin from telling everybody about the secret proceedings of the conclave.

Unrecognized Heroes

You cannot tell life's heroes by reading the tombstones; many an unrecognized hero walks our streets and perhaps even sits at our table. Heroism wears the strangest disguises and few of us are able to penetrate them.

Dr. Maier Cites Menace of Church Persecution

American churches may yet experience the persecution which has closed thousands of church buildings in Europe, Dr. Walter A. Maier, Ph. D. predicted today in his Sunday afternoon Lutheran Hour, broadcast over a coast-to-coast network.

Asserting that the church's great mission is the ministry of men's souls through the preaching of the cross, Dr. Maier said this charter purpose is often overshadowed by the church's preoccupation with social issues, labor troubles, perverted notions of birth control. As a consequence, the high respect in which the clergy and the work of the Church were formerly regarded is frequently forfeited.

We hear so much of psychology, psychiatry, psycho-therapy and psycho-analysis from some pulpits that little time or energy remains for the true healing of the human soul," Dr. Maier added. There is so much stress upon church leagues for industry, democracy and world peace that sometimes few recruits are left for the legions of Christ.

It is inevitable that such churches lose their hold upon the hearts of men and succeed in attracting people chiefly thru a maze of entertainment and winning their support thru gambling devices. It seems to me that enough automobiles are annually raffled by churches—in plain violation of the laws of the land—to keep the automotive industry beyond the possibility of another depression.

As a whole churches have let the education of their own children slip out of their hands into secular control. Charity, an integral part of early Christian life, has been relegated to social workers. There still remains the opportunity for preaching pure gospel, but if the churches fail in this, they have sealed their doom.

"Spider-Wasps" in Brazil.

In Brazil "spider-wasps" are fairly common. They store their underground nests with spiders and caterpillars which they have stung. In digging the nests, a spider-wasp often carries out a little pebble by holding it between the front legs and the "chin."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

CHILDREN

When taking pictures of children snap them in a natural pose—doing something.

STAND up straight now and look at me. "Put your hands down, darling, and smile. I want to get a good picture to send to Aunt Minnie."

Have you heard these two and many similar expressions on the part of parents when they are taking snapshots of their children? Let's hope you are not numbered among them for unless your child is quite apt at posing the result will be a rather uninteresting snapshot which does not do the child justice.

First of all, as you know, youngsters are the cutest when they are perfectly natural. If a lot of fuss is made to get them to stand just so, or an effort is made to get them to do a certain thing, the chances are they will look too posed in the finished print.

There are two types of child pictures, I might say; just plain record pictures and the other kind you should strive to get—story-telling pictures. A little tot standing straight as an arrow with arms stiffened against the sides of the body and staring at the camera is a good example of a record picture, but snap a picture of that same little rascal making mud pies, or playing traffic policeman, and you have a story-telling picture with real human interest appeal.

Children's pictures should always be taken fairly close up, rarely more than ten feet from the camera. If you have an ordinary box camera don't get closer than six or eight feet unless a portrait attachment is placed over the lens. With a portrait attachment you can get as close as three and a half feet to your subject and get sharp, distinct pictures that will show every curl and dimple. By moving a lever on the newer type box cameras, however, you can shoot as close as five feet to your subject without a portrait attachment.

With a folding camera of focusing type, the closer the subject is to the lens the more care is required in estimating the distance. Set the pointer on the distance scale at the number of feet between the lens and the child. If you change your position for succeeding pictures, be sure to change the pointer to the proper distance mark.

And watch your backgrounds. A nice, attractive background adds so much to your pictures. Telephone poles, wires, unattractive fences, garages, and what have you, often spoil an otherwise artistic, fascinating human interest picture. In fact, any prominent off-side object in the picture will detract from the interest in what the child is doing.

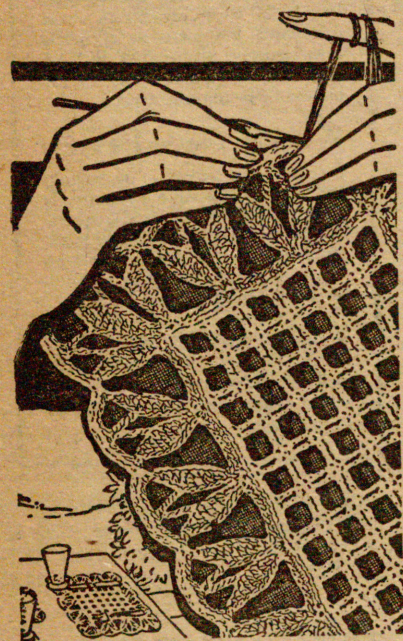

Here's another tip. Try to avoid having the sun shining directly in the child's eyes, for the poor little fellow can't help squinting under such conditions and neither could you. Let the sun come from the side. This gives an interesting lighting and what professionals call "roundness."

Follow these "tips" and you'll get real joy out of your snapshots.

Bedtime Story for Children

WHY JUMPER THE HARE WAS NOT AFRAID

THE most surprising thing about the meeting of Buster Bear with the other little people of the Green Forest was that he was introduced by Jumper the Hare. Now you know, Jumper the Hare is very, very timid. Everybody knows that. He is so timid that some people say he is afraid of his own shadow. Of course, this isn't true, but it is true that he is very, very timid. So no one could understand how it happened that he dared to introduce Buster Bear. In fact, he didn't seem any more afraid of Buster than were Jimmy Skunk and Prickly Porky the Porcupine. But everyone knows why they are not afraid; Jimmy has a little bag of scent and Prickly Porky has a thousand little spears to make other people, even those a great deal bigger than they are, respect them.

But Jumper the Hare has nothing of the kind. He has nothing with which to win respect save his long legs, and as he uses those to run away with, of course, he never wins respect with them, for you know people who run away are seldom respected. So it was that when Jumper appeared not in the least afraid of Buster Bear and introduced him as a friend, the other little people, most of whom were frightened almost to death, couldn't understand it at all. Peter Rabbit wasn't there at the time, but, of course he heard of it, and it puzzled him more than it did anyone else. He is timid himself, is Peter Rabbit, but he isn't as timid as his big cousin Jumper. And yet here was he himself having little cold chills of fright at the very thought of those great claws of Buster Bear, while Jumper was not afraid at all. It was too much for Peter, and the first chance he got he asked Jumper about it.

Jumper smiled. "Why," said he, "Buster Bear comes from the Great Woods where I came from, and I know all about him and he knows all about me. So we are friends."

Peter scratched his head thoughtfully. Somehow he didn't understand any better than before. "Aren't you afraid of those great big, cruel claws?" he asked. "No," said he. "Why should I be afraid of them?"

"Because they can tear you all to pieces!" yelled Peter promptly. "But they can't!" cried Jumper happily. That is just what they can't do, and that is why I am not afraid!"

"I don't see why they can't," persisted Peter.

"Because they can't catch me!" Jumper made a long jump, a very long jump, twice as long a jump as Peter could make, as if to show why those cruel claws could not catch him. Peter began to see what Jumper the Hare meant.

"You mean you are not afraid of Buster Bear because you think Buster cannot catch you; is that it?" asked Peter.

Jumper nodded his head so fast that he made his long ears flop. "That's just it!" said he. "Buster Bear can't catch me. I know it and he knows it, and so he doesn't waste any time trying. Instead we are very good friends. The only things to be afraid of in this world are things you know may hurt you, no matter how sharp you watch out.

CHOCOLATE EVER POPULAR FLAVOR

Be Sure It Blends Properly
With Other Ingredients.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THE Spaniards, when they conquered Mexico, took back to Spain gold and other treasures. Nothing, however, was appreciated so much by the Spanish people as a whole, as the chocolate, which soon became the national drink, as it had been and still is in Mexico. This was accomplished in spite of the fact that church officials considered it a wicked luxury, especially when it became the custom to have it brought during long services to church. In commenting upon this custom, Dr. Doran in his "Table Traits" announces, "A cup of good chocolate may indeed afford the drinker strength and patience to undergo a bad sermon."

"To make really good chocolate," says Brillat-Savarin, "one must solve a number of very subtle equations. The roasting of the cocoa bean is an operation so delicate as to require a tact bordering on inspiration." The roasting of the beans is very important whether they are to be used for manufacture of cake, chocolate or cocoa, as fine flavor is developed by the roasting process just as it is by roasting coffee.

In this country cocoa is used for the preparation of beverages more often than is chocolate. In the preparation of cocoa powder, a large part of the cocoa butter is removed. The quality of the cocoa bean and the amount of cocoa butter extracted as well as the roasting are all important.

When chocolate is used care must be taken that it is prepared in such a way that it will blend smoothly with the other ingredients of the recipe. For cake and cookies it may be melted over hot—not boiling—water. When it is used with hot milk for pudding or for beverages it may be cut into smaller pieces and melted in the milk. Instead, it may be cooked with a small amount of cold water over direct heat until the mixture is smooth and thick. A cake of chocolate has usually been marked off in squares which weigh one ounce. Recently one of the oldest manufacturers has marked it into half ounce pieces, which allows us to measure even more accurately than before. In order to have a smooth beverage when cocoa is used cold water should be added and stirred with the powder over the direct heat until the mixture is smooth and thick after which it may be boiled a moment before the cold milk is added. This method allows us to make cocoa with the use of only one utensil. As soon as the milk begins to steam the mixture should be beaten until foamy with a heavy beater in order to prevent the scum's forming.

Whipped cream is usually served with both chocolate and cocoa. Instead a marshmallow may be put into each cup before the beverage is poured. This garnish is particularly favored by the children.

Now, I am afraid of Granny Fox and Old Man Coyote because they are so sly and swift that I am never sure that I am safe from them. But Buster Bear is not swift enough or sly enough to make me afraid. When you have known Buster as long as I have you will know that he isn't half so terrible as he looks, and that he really can be very nice and no end of fun. I'm not afraid of Buster because I've learned how to keep out of his way, and when you've learned the same thing you won't be afraid either."

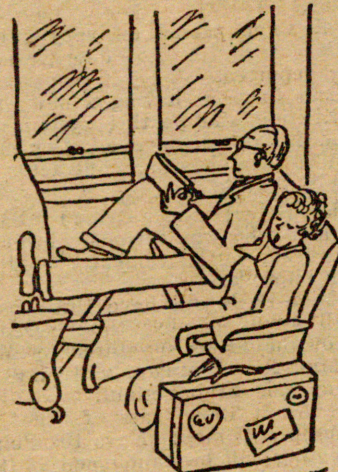

Peter looked as if he would like to believe it, but found it a little more than he could quite credit.

THE people who always have to have two seats apiece whenever they ride two miles on a train... we could crown them.

Sometimes, we'll admit we envy them. We've tried ourselves by stacking magazines and hats and umbrellas all around us, to discourage people from trying to sit with us. But somehow a mother with a baby, or an old lady with a cane, always comes along and looks wistfully at our pile of belongings. And we're finished. By the end of the journey we're holding the baby or the cane.

So maybe it's sour grapes. But we've come to the conclusion that one seat is all a person with one ticket should try to fill. And the people who spread themselves out so comfortably over two should be firmly handled. If by scornful look, or gentle questioning we can't make them budge, we intend to sit right down on their feet, or their hats. That ought to teach them.

air through a bed of packed coal, but if there are thin places, air will rush through them with the effect of a blacksmith's forge. This is a cause of clinking. Forced draft is sometimes used through an electric blower that forces air into the ash-pit. With this there is also the possibility of clinking. But there is also a risk of coal gas trouble. If the fire has been stoked some little time before the blower is turned on, the space above the coal bed becomes filled with coal gas; then, with the starting up of the blower, sparks passing through will ignite the gas, and there may be an explosion. A blower is safe only with skilful stoking and with watchfulness.

When small sizes are used, stoking should be by what is called the "hot spot" method. The first step in stoking is to rake the glowing coals into a sloping bank with the top at the level of the firing door. This leaves a cavity at the back, which is filled with new coal. Gas that is produced is then ignited by the "hot spot."

While there is economy in buying coal of small size, there may not be economy in using it. Unless a furnace is adapted to it, much of the small coal will drop through the grates unburned. Besides that, much more attention is required in maintaining a good fire.

FIRST AID TO THE AILING HOUSE

By Roger B. Whitman

SMALL COAL SIZES

BECAUSE of the demand, stove size coal sells at a higher price than nut coal and pea coal, which are smaller. There is, of course, a desire to use these smaller sizes because of economy. Under certain conditions this is quite possible, although if the conditions are not met, coal gas is produced. This may result in puffs and even small explosions in the fire-box, or the passing of the coal gas through the house.

With coal of stove size and larger, the spaces between the lumps permit the free passage of air, and coal gas is burned off as fast as it is produced. The flickering blue flame above a bed of fresh coal is burning coal gas.

As small coal sizes pack more closely, air cannot pass through so freely, and the gas, which cannot burn without air, may collect in the fire-box. Later, with a spark, there may be a puff that will blow open the fire-door.

PHILLIPS'
WAY

The quick way to alkalize is this: Take two teaspoons of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia 30 minutes after eating and drinking. Or, when among others—take two Phillips' Tablets that come in a small flat tin you carry in purse or vest pocket.—You do it unnoticed.

Relief is almost immediate. "Gas," nausea, acid breath and other offensive symptoms leave.—That "stuffed" feeling and pains from "acid indigestion" cease to annoy. You feel great.

This is the way, we believe, more doctors use than any other when alkalizing upset stomach.

Battle Half Over

A man prepared has half fought the battle.—Cervantes.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm.

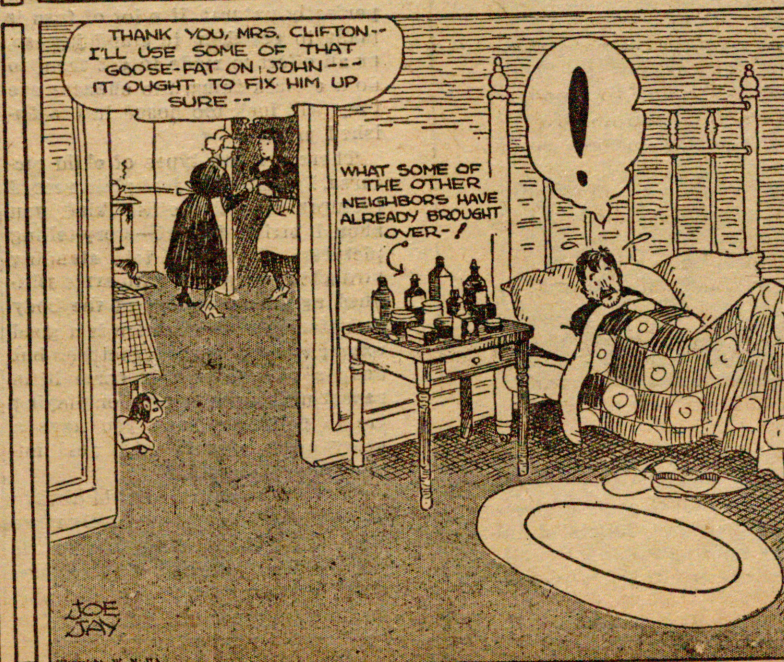

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

ILLINOIS
BREVITIES

Christian G. Wonn, seventy years old, Elgin, active in the fire insurance business in Illinois for more than 50 years, died in Quincy.

Mattoon was selected as site of the 1938 Women's Christian Temperance union convention at the closing session of the organization's 1937 convention in Canton.

Mrs. Rosalie Mosely, twenty years old, a bride of two months, committed suicide by inhaling gas in her home in Aurora. Her husband, Earl, said they quarreled.

Albert G. Jefferson of Wilmette, who as a first lieutenant of Company C, One Hundred and Thirty-first infantry, won the distinguished service cross in the World war, died at the Hines Memorial hospital.

W. C. Gill of Peoria was re-elected president of the Coal Producers' Association of Illinois at its annual meeting in Springfield. The association deals with the Progressive Miners of America in contract matters. Glenn A. Shafer of Pana was re-elected secretary-treasurer, and D. W. Green of O'Fallon vice president.

Ray Carroll, fifty-two years old, of Marion, a former Democratic state representative, was found dead by the side of his overturned automobile five miles west of Marion on the road to Herrin. Carroll was Marion city treasurer and connected with the waterworks division of the Illinois department of public works and buildings.

The Illinois commerce commission authorized the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois and the Illinois Iowa Power company to build approximately 101 miles of rural electric line. The line will run through Livingston, Will, Kankakee, Woodford, Marshall, Kendall, Grundy, Lake, LaSalle, Cook, Champaign, Macoupin and Montgomery counties.

State Senator Richey V. Graham of the nineteenth senatorial district, which includes a portion of Chicago's west side and most of the towns of Cicero and Berwyn, announced that he had moved from his district and would not seek re-election to the legislature next year. Senator Graham, a Democrat, will have completed eight years in the senate and four in the house when his term expires in January, 1939.

Illinois Masons elected Everett L. Lawrence of Quincy, grand master at the organization's annual business meeting in Chicago. Other officers elected included: Dan de Baugh, Chicago, deputy grand master; Karl J. Mohr, Rockford, senior grand warden; Stuard E. Pierson, Carrollton, junior grand warden; Edward C. Mullen, Chicago, re-elected grand treasurer; and Richard C. Davenport, Harrisburg, re-elected grand secretary.

Donald Lewis, a farmer near Hickley in DeKalb county, was driving his truck when it stalled on the Burlington tracks near Waterman. He saw the Chicago-bound Zephyr speeding toward him but he had not time to jump, so he just closed his eyes. He felt a jar, looked up and noticed that the train clipped off the truck's radiator, carrying it down the tracks for 200 feet. The train crew found Lewis sitting in the cab unhurt.

Ted Smith, twenty-seven years old, an employee of Hiram Walker & Sons, Inc., in Peoria, died in an attempt to rescue a fellow worker, Harry Oppen, from a deep well at the distilling company plant. Oppen came by gas when he descended into the well to take a level reading. Oppen was brought to the surface by Smith, Earl Schilling, and Leonard Buckingham. Smith, last on the ladder, fell back and was pronounced dead when his body was recovered.

Ninety-year-old Rockford college in Rockford witnessed the induction of its first woman president in 20 years. She is Dr. Mary Ashby Cheek, the tenth president of the Illinois institution. She succeeds Gordon Keith Chalmers, who is retiring to become president of Kenyon college. Dr. Cheek is a native of Kentucky and a graduate of Mount Holyoke college, where she later taught and acted as dean of residence and from which she holds an honorary doctorate of laws.

The ninth unit of the statewide chain of co-operative producers' creameries has been organized at Carlinville and will begin operating as soon as a plant can be built, leased or bought and equipped, the Illinois Agricultural association announced. The new unit will be known as the Producers Creamery of Carlinville. It will process cream for farmers in Macoupin, Greene, Montgomery, Bond, Christian and Madison counties, where routes will be organized to pick up cream direct from the farm.

Rev. C. W. Johnson, eighty-six years old, Peoria's pioneer minister in point of service, died after a brief illness. He had been traveling secretary of the Swedish Mission church of Illinois. He completed 56 years' active service when he resigned.

The resignation of Dr. Willard E. Hotchkiss, president of Armour institute, Chicago, since January 1, 1933, was announced by James D. Cunningham, chairman of the board of trustees. Henry T. Heald, dean of the institute, was named acting president.

Washington
DigestNational Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington. — In this so-called modern civilization of ours when we are supposed to keep pace with progress, every one of us is confronted every day with some sort of government regulation or restriction. We are told what to do and what not to do and a good many politicians want to increase the number of things we are told to do.

Included in this modern civilization is a perfect network of spies who bear official titles of one kind or another, and probably the most insistent of these spies are the agents of government who look after taxes. All of which is necessary because tax payers undoubtedly will dodge a little if they can get away with it. The federal government has a good many thousands of them; state governments have them and county and city governments maintain a veritable army of employees whose job it is to check up on taxpayers. They do their job thoroughly. Make no mistake about that. If the taxpayer does not come through in accordance with the orders of the tax collectors, there is plenty of punishment.

Which brings us to the point of and the reason for this discussion. It sets the stage for the question: If the government, national, state or local, is so punctilious about tax collections, the gathering in of people's money, why is it that government is not equally punctilious about the way the money is spent? This question is very much to the forefront now. It is a question of paramount importance because of a proposal for governmental reorganization which President Roosevelt insists must be considered by the forthcoming session of congress. The federal government must be reorganized, according to the President's argument, is that the present structure is inefficient, wasteful, and generally quite unwieldy.

It is to be granted, I think, that much of the present federal government structure is inefficient, wasteful and unwieldy. Throughout the government one will find various agencies charged with the same responsibilities, doing things in opposite directions, winding and binding red tape around the citizens until some of them scarcely can get a hand free to mark their ballots. The whole thing needs a thorough going over but, as I see the picture, this going over should be done with a view to making governmental machinery workable and rebuilding only where hastily conceived governmental agencies and functions have demonstrated that they are acting as a deterrent rather than an encouragement to the nation as a whole.

I have no quarrel with Mr. Roosevelt concerning the need for changing some parts of the governmental machine. I have a very definite objection, however, to some of the changes he proposes. I object strenuously, for example, to his move to destroy the present setup for protection against improper spending of the taxpayers' money. Specifically, I can see no possible excuse for Mr. Roosevelt's demand that the general accounting office be made subservient again to the whims of politicians by placing that agency under the control of a political appointee, namely, the secretary of the treasury. That is exactly what is proposed, and if the President's governmental reorganization program is accepted by congress in its present form, the President of the United States, whether Mr. Roosevelt or his successor, again will be able to determine to a large measure how the taxpayers' money is spent.

That may appear to be an exaggerated statement. One may ask about the constitutional provision which requires that all appropriations shall be made by congress. This would seem to prevent executive mismanagement of the taxpayers' money. Such, however, unfortunately is not the case because we have had proof under President Roosevelt's administration what can be done when one political party has such complete control of the machinery of government. Congress appropriated billions. True. But had there been no general accounting office in existence, I doubt if anyone could have even guessed what would have happened to those vast sums of money.

It has been my privilege to watch operation of the federal government almost 20 years. Because of that experience, I think I am able to say that I am more conversant with the tricks to which politicians resort in getting money out of the treasury than persons who have not had an opportunity to study the government as it actually functions. And because of that experience, I am going to make the unequivocal statement that unless congress repels Mr. Roosevelt's plan to destroy the curb on trick and illegal spending, this nation and its citizens will pay for the folly in waste not now conceivable.

Someone might arise and say that my statement is unjustified because there was not such a terrific drain on the treasury before the general accounting office came into existence in 1921. My answer to that is that there was a tremendous drain on the treasury before 1921 when the accounting, auditing of bills and checks, was done by individual agencies of the government. The difficulty is that, except for war time agencies, the cost of running the federal government before the general accounting office was established was only about one-seventh of what it is now. None of the federal agencies then in existence were as large then as they are now; none had as much authority nor as great a scope of operations, and the bulk of the new agencies have been born in legislation that is haphazard and undigested to say the least. The older agencies of government have scores of workers who know how to handle their business. Regrettably, it must be said that most of the new agencies are controlled by, completely filled up with, men who are unfamiliar with the gigantic problems their jobs entail.

Public sentiment is a thing difficult to understand. For example, millions of people became wrought up when President Roosevelt sought to increase the membership of the Supreme court of the United States by the addition of six judges of his own choosing. They rightfully fought back against the destruction of our judicial system. Fighting words characterized the criticism of Mr. Roosevelt and his New Dealers who sought to break down the system of checks and balances created in our government by the founding fathers when they provided for executive, legislative and judicial divisions of governmental authority.

So, I am wondering why thus far there has not been an outburst of vehement criticism of Mr. Roosevelt with reference to the proposed destruction of the check on spending. I am wondering, too, why people who complain so violently against spies in the form of tax investigators should not demand of their government equal protection for the funds after they have been taken away from the taxpayers.

There are two other agencies of the federal government which Mr. Roosevelt's reorganization plan will eventually destroy. Each has proved its worth. Each has a record of service to the nation and protection for individual citizens that cannot be ignored. I refer to the interstate commerce commission and the federal trade commission.

The ICC has supervised the railroads nearly half a century. It has compelled them to be fair when some individuals in the railroad industry were inclined to cheat or take advantage of an unorganized segment of the population. Sometimes there has been criticism of the commission for placing the railroads in a strait-jacket, but the good that the ICC has done far outweighs any damages it has caused.

Yet, it is proposed in the President's reorganization plan to take away the independence which has characterized the history of the operations of this agency. The President wants to place over the commission a political appointee responsible only to the Chief Executive.

Through all of the years I have worked in Washington, there has been a never-ending effort on the part of politicians to get their hands on the agency that controls the railroads. It takes no stretch of the imagination to see what would happen if the politicians were able to succeed in this direction. I am quite convinced that if the ICC is subordinated to the political philosophy of a presidential appointee, every one of us who uses the railroads will be paying toll. The toll will not go to the railroads but to the politicians.

With respect to the federal trade commission much the same can be said. Like the ICC, the trade commission is quasi judicial. It is an independent agency. Times unnumbered, it has stepped on crooked business and has forced business of this stripe to play the game within the regulations. On occasion, I have criticized specific actions by the commission as lacking in judicial consideration. By and large, however, I think no one can say unqualifiedly that the federal trade commission has failed to do its job in the interest of individual citizens—which, after all, is what government is supposed to do.

Lesson for November 7

CHRISTIAN CHARACTER AND PEACE

LESSON TEXT—Colossians 3:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body.—Colossians 3:15.
PRIMARY TOPIC—In His Name.
JUNIOR TOPIC—In His Name.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How May I Have Peace?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Cure for Strife.

Armistice day is but a few days away, a fact which was probably in mind when the title of our lesson was chosen, for while it speaks of "Christian character," it also refers to "peace." But the peace spoken of here is the peace of God which is the result of peace with God and which issues in holy living. The only hope of this world for a real and lasting peace is in the winning of men and women to glad allegiance to the Prince of Peace, our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

Altogether proper is the close connection in Scripture between the most profound spiritual truth and practical holy living. Whether it be done in a land of enlightenment or in the midst of heathen darkness the teaching of the deep things of God brings forth in the receptive heart an appreciation of God's provision for our redemption, a consciousness and hatred of sin and an appropriation of victory in Christ. All three of these factors emerge in the study of our lesson.

I. "Seek Those Things Which Are Above" (vv. 1-4).

Faith in Christ makes us one with him in his death and in his resurrection. We are therefore to live in resurrection power. Our Lord has entered into heaven, and is there seated at God's right hand. If we are in him, if we have died and arisen with him, we are dead to the things of this world and our one desire is to "seek those things which are above."

The mystic union of the believer with Christ brings us so close to God our Father that we may say with the poet:

"Near, so very near to God,
Nearer I could not be,
For in the person of His Son
I am as near as He."

We are "hid with Christ in God." He is our very life. Note however that this union with Christ expresses itself in a most practical manner for we as Christians are admonished to

II. "Mortify Your Members . . . upon the Earth" (vv. 5-9).

The most spiritual Christian is the one who is most sensitive to sin and most earnest in his purpose that it should be mortified—which means "put to death." We may not temporize—we must not compromise with sin. Put it to death. The list of things which are to be put away include a number of sins which we recognize at once as utterly inconsistent with a Christian profession. But note also that there are a number of them which are all too common among Christian people—covetousness, anger, wrath, malice, and so forth. Lying and shameful talk are condoned by some (and practiced by many).

III. "Put On the New Man" (vv. 11-17).

Christianity is positive. We put off sin—we put on righteousness. Knowing no lines of racial or creedal distinction we recognize Christ as "all and in all." Then as "God's elect, holy and beloved," we are clothed with the Spirit of Christ. Tenderhearted, kind, lowly, meek, of a forgiving spirit, long-suffering; all these Christlike ways of living should appear in those who are hid with him in God. As the encircling band which holds together these beautiful and precious virtues, we have love, "the bond of perfectness" (v. 14).

These outward manifestations of our oneness with Christ have an inward controlling power—for in our hearts "the peace of Christ" is to "rule." The word means to serve as "umpire," as a referee in times of difficulty. There in the Christian man's inmost being we also find the "word of Christ" dwelling, really abiding, and not in scarcity but "richly." Small wonder that there is in such a heart a never-ending song which glorifies God's grace and which helps and admonishes others.

Our final verse sums up the life of the Christian, for in whatsoever he does there is but one motive, one purpose—a willing thankful response to the will of God. He does nothing that he cannot do in the name of the Lord Jesus.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

There May Be Many Reasons for Making Quilted Chair Pads.

IF ALL the reasons for quilted chair pads were lined up in order of their importance the most intangible reason of all might head the list. Yes, it is quite likely that any decorator, amateur or professional would place atmosphere at the top. But then it is also possible that first rating might be given to the reason that the pressure of slats across the backs of chairs is softened by quilted pads. Then, though it might not be mentioned, it is a known fact that worn out cane seats are sometimes replaced with inexpensive composition seats which may be disguised by gay quilted pads.

Chintz, calico or gingham chair pads are in fact one of the simplest and most inexpensive ways of adding color and charm as well as comfort to a room. Such pads are often used on the backs of chairs and not on the seats, and especially for side chairs, the seat pads used without any back covering. In making such small things as these it is quite easy to do the quilting on the machine. Or, if you wish to take the other point of view about it, the work of quilting them by hand would not consume an unreasonable amount of time. There is no doubt that handwork has a certain quaintness that machine work lacks.

The pads shown here are made with one layer of sheet wadding between the two layers of the chintz. The edge bindings and ties are made of bias tape. Cut the three layers of the pad material exactly the size and shape you want them to be when finished. Place the sheet wadding between the two layers of covering material as shown here at A. Either pin or baste in this position, and then quilt as shown here at B. Make the ties by stitching the lengthwise edges of the bias tape together, and then tack them to the corners of the pad as at C before it is bound. Now, bind the edges, sewing the ties right with the binding as shown here at D.

Heights Woman's Club Hostess To Third District

The Chicago Heights Women's club was hostess to the Third district Monday at an all day meeting which convened at 10:30 a. m. with 340 women attending. After the usual opening ceremony, a public events round table was conducted by the delegates to the Council meeting.

Crime was one of the subjects thus handled, and we must say, it was well and practically handled. It was shown there are 4,300,000 active criminals in this country with 15 billion dollars being spent on it each year. When we compare the 2½ billion dollars this country spends on education, it does not seem very much. There is one out of every 29 citizens who are criminals in the United States. The women who were speaking on this subject felt there were too few convictions, too many sob sisters, too many shyster lawyers, too many delays in court cases. In speaking of the parole system, it was shown that in Illinois there were 6,318 paroled, with 689 being returned to prison; 284 paroled were from Chicago and 275 from southern Cook county. They felt a person committing a crime for the first time might be well to be paroled, but not a repeater, as they declared there was no cure for crime, other than that of remodeling human nature, when citizens would be honest. Our criminals have no respect for law.

An example was shown of a kidnapper recently being given a sentence of 45 years, in 15 years would be paroled and then he would be 45 years of age, ready to commit crime again.

It was brought out, when dealing with the subject of the "Use of school buildings for subversive propaganda", that it is not well that our public schools should be used for all community meetings, as sometimes, it could be and often is, communism in disguise.

After lunch a most enjoyable sing was had, led by Mr. Glenn Harding. The last speaker of the day, was Mr. Philip Maxwell of the Chicago Tribune, director of the Musical Festival. His speech was witty and also serious and most delightful to listen to.

Field Trip of C.O.S.

The Chicago Ornithological Society held its 3rd annual outing at the Orland Wild-Life Preserve on October 10. Being a rainy day only nine members were present. The group met at the school house as usual at 9:00 o'clock. At 9:30 they started to walk around the slough and at about 2:30 o'clock were back at the school again. They were almost soaked through, due to the rain.

A fire was then built to dry out. While so doing, notes were compared and to their surprise a goodly number of birds had been observed despite the rain. Most important of the day were, the immature Bald Eagle and the 25 Canada Geese. The total species seen was 69.

The following is a list of birds seen: pied billed grebe, double-crested cormorant, great blue heron, American egret, green heron, black-crowned night heron, bittern, Canada geese, mallard duck, baldpate duck, pintail duck, green wing teal, blue wing teal, shoveler duck, wood duck, red head duck, ring neck duck, canvasback duck, scaup duck, bald eagle, marsh hawk, peregrine hawk, Virginia rail, coot, killdeer, woodcock, Wilson snipe, dowitcher, semipalmated sandpiper, herring gull, common tern, kingfisher, hairy woodpecker, downy woodpecker, phoebe, wood pewee, blue jay, crow, chickadee, white breasted nuthatch, brown creeper, long billed marsh wren, short billed marsh wren, brown thrasher, robin, sora rail, hermit thrush, bluebird, golden crowned kinglet, starling, orange crowned warbler, myrtle warbler, northern yellow throat, meadow lark, E. red-wing blackbird, rusty blackbird, cardinal, goldfinch, red-eyed towhee, slate colored junco, field sparrow, Harris' sparrow, white crowned sparrow, white throated sparrow, fox sparrow, Lincoln sparrow, swamp sparrow and song sparrow.
